

Argument Against Bluffdale Property Tax Increase

BLUFFDALE CITY

It is highly inappropriate to increase taxes, especially a 31% increase to property taxes, during historic inflationary times. Tax increases negatively impact the poorest among us first. Our city has young families that cannot afford homes, families that cannot pay their utilities and rents due to already existing inflationary trickle down from landlords, families that struggle to put food on tables now, and many in our city on fixed incomes that absolutely cannot afford a 31% increase to property taxes.

Businesses with a property tax increase will pass that down to consumers whose dollar is already decreased in inflationary value.

We support our Fire and Police, recognize their vital work, and want them to be compensated justly. Increasing taxes in grossly historic inflationary times is not the answer, strategic budgeting is.
